105 Wounded, 41 Dead During Four-Day Uprising

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) - The navy surrendered virtually unconditionally Friday to end Argentina's four-day revolt. Casualties were estimated at 41 dead and 105 wounded.

The sweeping "submission" terms called for a deep cut, estimated at some 60 per cent in the 6,000-8,000-man strength of the Argentine marine corps. It did not provide for surrender of the big Puerto Belgrano base, as originally reported, but stipulated that all warships at sea would be immediately recalled. At least two Argentine admirals and eight ship captains fled the country in a flying boat and arrived at Montevideo, Uruguay, across the river Plate 100 miles away, in search of political asylum. They brought to 41 the number of navy men who have fled the country.

Free Book... Tells All... Sells Nothing

"I was afraid I needed a hearing aid. But thank goodness I sent for that booklet. Now I know I don't need one after all. Maybe it will help you as it helped me."

If you hear, but don't understand, perhaps you don't need a hearing aid-as you'll learn from this revealing 43page booklet, "Your Hearing and Your Health."

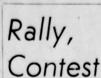

It doesn't sell a thing, not even a single word about Sonotone's new all-transistor hearing aid. Contains facts about care of the ears; effects of vitamins and drugs on hearing; whether deafness is inherited; and many other revealing facts. And this booklet is FREE. FREE of charge and FREE of salesmanship.

RECEIVES AWARD - Richard Williams, son of Dr. and Mrs. Richard J. Williams, 1908 Bedford Street, was presented the "Award of Merit" by Mrs. Jack Towler, president of the Allegany County Animal Welfare Society, yesterday. Richard was selected by the society to receive the award for an "outstanding act of kindness." At the recent meeting when the selection was voted, Mrs. Edward Finan, executive director, explained how residents of the Bedford Road area for several days heard a dog barking: how Richard searched the hillside, finally found an abandoned well and climbed down to rescue the pup.

Poor TV Has Reds Looking West

By DICK KLEINER

NEW YORK (NEA)-Out in a barren stretch of Russian soil, Sam Jaffe, ABC's Moscow correspondent, saw a typical Russian log cabin. And, sprouting out of its typical Russian roof was a television aerial.

The Russians have, in recent years, Jaffe says, become big television fans. In the country as well as the city, more and more of the Soviet citizens are buying sets. This isn't easy for them because they are expensive; Jaffe estimates the average set costs a Russian as much as he earns in three months. And there is no such animal as credit or buying on time.

Because of this late upsurge of interest in television, Jaffe says, the Soviet government has quite recently become conscious of television's propaganda uses.

Their first efforts in that direction were pretty inept," he says. "But there's a new man in charge now."

The new man is Mikhail Kharlamov, minister for the state committee on radio and television. Jaffe says he's a smart, young operator who (like his American counterparts) has moved in and brought his cronies with him. Most of them have had some service in the U.S., speak English and want Russian television to become more like Ameri-

Kharlamov is adding a third channel to the present two. He's attempting to spice up the programming, which, by American standards, is amateurish.

The most popular program, according to Jaffe, is called The Late Show. It bears no resemblance to our program of that name. This, a Saturday night feature, is designed with the express intention of keeping teen-agers at home. It runs until 11 p. m. (the latest program, hence the title) and is a loose hodge-podge of party games.

There is little else. The Russians cover some sporting events, have a few plays (but usually only an act or two of a current hit), some old movies, and what passes for a discussion program. In this, Russian newsmen will hash over some current event topic, and Jaffe says they sometimes disagree-"but they know how far they can go.

In only one area—children's programs-is Russian television

Gradually, the uses of television for propaganda are expanding. Where the old radio-television administration used crude, hit-'em-over-the-head tactics (lectures and films on Marxism and Leninism), the new group is becoming more subtle, inserting its message into existing shows softly.

The Russian citizen, when he tires of Russia's current poor crop of shows, tunes around. If he's lucky, he picks up transmissions from some of the Russian satellites - Poland or Romania, for example-which are considerably better.

Jaffe says this, coupled with the Russians' growing awareness of things outside the Soviet Union itself, is the bright hope for the future.

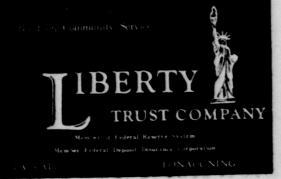

"The westernization of the younger generation," he says, is the most promising thing today. They were brought up to hate and fear the West, but it didn't take. They are learning about the West from books, satellite television, the visits of western performers-and they are eager for more. They no longer fear the West, nor do they fear speaking out to some extent.

"In Moscow, I have a company car. It used to be that the Russians would not believe that average American could afford such a car. But now, from one source or another, they have learned that it is quite possible. I'm never scoffed at any more when I say that many Americans have cars like mine.

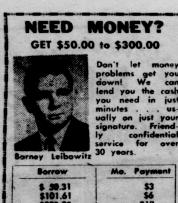

Television may yet play a part in thawing the Cold War.

The five days

The Palms and the Cross were but five days apart!

On Sunday, down a road strewn with palms, Christ rode triumphantly into Jerusalem . . . and men hailed Him as their King.

On Friday He climbed the rugged slope of Calvary . . . and they nailed Him to a Cross. How suddenly good turns to evil! How quickly we sometimes lose our vision of God! The paradox of those five days is history's striking lesson in the importance of a constant faith. The faltering, hot and cold sort of religion made possible the Crucifixion! Palm Sunday you'll be going to Church. In a quiet moment in the sanctuary remember those five days . . . resolve to worship EVERY Sunday,

ALL FOR THE CHURCH

The Church is the greatest fac-character and good citizenship. It is a storehouse of spiritual val-

Without a strong Chur

neither democracy nor civilization can survive. There are four sound reasons why every person should attend services regularly and support the Church. They are: (1) For his own sake. (2)

For his children's sake. (3) For the sake of his community and nation. (4) For the sake of the moral and material support.

Plan to go to church regularly and read your Bible daily.

The combination was stretched over a horizontal pole held in place by two upright sticks or, often, by muskets stuck into the ground with bayonets fixed. Ends were left open or draped with tree boughs, coats or blankets. Many Yanks held the shelter tents in low esteem. In his vivid chronicle, "The Life of

The nickname "dog tent" reflected a popular feeling about them in the ranks. During winter months inclement weather and relative inactivity of the forces produced a marked change in soldier dwellings. Many soldiers built log huts of the "pen" type, after the fashion of frontier cabins, with slanting roofs of boards [see below]. "If logs were not available, and sometimes when they were, Yanks might erect frame huts with materials obtained by wrecking abandoned Southern dwellings," Wiley says.

> mon type of winter quarter was a hybridized structure. Shelter tents were placed on log bases, and the roofs made more impervious to moisture and cold by stretching rubber blankets or ponchos over the fabric. Both these and the log huts were often heated by fireplaces built of sticks daubed with clay. Chimneys improvised

Another Fad Is Declining

A magazine for collectors reports that prices of antiques are declining from their peak and that the downturn is especially noticeable in prices for junk that passed as antiques several

The craze to obtain possession of any article, no matter how worthless, if it was old became a mania during recent years. There was always a steadily increasing demand for genuine antiques in furniture, dishes, etc., but cracked, damaged and defective articles found few takers and at low prices.

It was in this category that demand rose by leaps and bounds in recent years. Antique shops, their shelves denuded, stocked their rooms with glued and patched junk and went to town. Trash brought higher prices than did genuine antiques a few years previously.

But now the trend has been reversed. Genuine antiques are in great demand, and at the highest prices ever, but they are scarce. People who have them seem to be holding on to them. But people no longer want junk and the market has become glutted.

Perhaps there is an indication in this of the future trend of America's economy. Perhaps the time is not long distant when people will demand better merchandise.

The Cultural Wasteland

The other night, visiting an ardent TV buff, I had my first glimpse of a remote control gadget in action. Whenever there was a pause for anything dear to a sponsor's heart, the owner pointed her deadly electronic gun at the program-and, pouf!, another advertisement bit the dust. Blotto for the plug, silence for the singing

Now, I have nothing against advertising (where would writers be without it?), but I believe in Emerson's Law of Compensation, and the remote control gadget-also known as a blab-off-is a perfect example of that law in operation. More than fifteen years ago one company devised a way of permitting the entertainment industry to "put a box office" into TV without having to sell the program to a sponsor. Called phonevision, the invention, which would have used a post-paid telephone signal to provide an audience with TV fare for small fees, was perfectly practical. But the FCC-which, in the Thirties, had delayed the advent of television itself for four years in order to "protect" the owners of radio sets-said "nix." It has taken a long time for the FCC to relax its ogreish surveillance to the point of permitting a few pay-as-you-see TV tests. But the FCC was originally created to assign wave lengths to broadcasting stations. How come it assumes the power to tell a station how it shall finance

Through its chairman, Newton Minow, the FCC has been complaining about the "cultural aridity" of TV and blaming the big sponsors of shows. Well, the person who pays the bills certainly has some right to call the tune. If the FCC really wanted variety on TV, it did exactly the wrong thing when it put the pay-as-you-see idea on ice for the better part of two decades.

The Law of Compensation may yet force the FCC to let the audience decide what sort of TV programs it wants, and how those programs shall be financed. Meanwhile one company, stymied in its hopes for payas-you-see TV, has had its revenge. The blab-off is eliminating the advertiser's damned reiterativeness from the home at the will of the TV-viewer-and nobody can do a thing about it without violating the Constitutional law against unreasonable searches and

Speaking of TV fare, the official claim that sin, in the average western or gang-buster program, always gets its come-uppance, may be statistically true. But the come-uppance is seldom as exciting as the crime that leads to it. The other day a Mafia mobster who had been seized in the raid at Apalachin, New York, and subsequently imprisoned on another charge, put in a request for a transfer from Leavenworth Prison on the ground that staring at the dull grey walls of a Federal pen was too much for anybody to take. When the wages of sin are boredom, how can you make TV drama out of that?

If this column seems to be following Newton Minow in applying unduly strict standards to TV, let me hasten to establish my impartiality by paying my respects to the current crop of magazines. The television commercial is at least kept apart from the entertainment itself. But in some of the monthly magazines I defy anybody to separate the advertisements from the articles and stories without calling in a trained investigator from the FBI.

Everything bleeds into everything else, the authors' by-lines can't be found without the aid of a microscope, and the eye reacts to the whole assembly as it would to a salvo of Roman candles discharged against a background of pinwheels on an old-fashioned Fourth of July. In some magazines that do manage to keep the advertisements typographically separated from the articles. a strange presumption is established by the maintenance of off-beat article departments called by variations of the phrase "Speaking Out." Are we to understand from this that nothing else in the magazine in question "speaks out"? Obviously not. But what is ne sense in making distinctions without differences?

I'm just speaking out. A final note on the culture of a masochistic age: Dwight MacDonald, a sparkling critic who spends his time attacking TV producers, magazine editors and book publishers for debasing "high art" into something called "midcult art," now finds himself in clover, with TV producers, magazine editors and book publishers all beating a path to his door. The slogan used to be, "If you can't beat 'em, join 'em." Now you join 'em by beating 'em; the best way to make friends, it turns out, is to set up shop as a professional enemy. Well, in an age that defends the Monroe Doctrine by protecting the ships and soldiers of those who would violate it, this is just the modern variety of

Canadian Party It Helped To Unseat

TORONTO - Canadians are saying that the United States, having caused the downfall of the anti-American Diefenbaker government with one booboo, will now re elect the same anti-American government with a second booboo. And it looks as if they may be right. This refers of course to the abrupt statement issued by the State Department on the late afternoon of January 30, curtly demanding that Canada go through with its agreement to put nuclear warheads on missiles it was purchasing from the United States. The unfriendly tenor of the statement and the fact that it was published only 30 minutes after being delivered to the Canadian Embassy, was a political gift to Prime Minister John Diefenbaker, already considered anti-American. He resigned and called for a new election. What Canadians don't know, is that next day President Kennedy phoned the State Department, furious over publication of the unfriendly Canadian statement and asked where it had come from. The reply was: "It came from you.'

What happened was that Mc-George Bundy, White House aide on foreign affairs and security problems, had sent the statement over to the State Department, and the department thinking that it was a direct order from President

By Drew Pearson

U. S. May Ensure Re-election Of

Kennedy, had issued it without question

There has been a certain amount friction between Dean Rusk, the actual Secretary of State, and McGeorge Bundy, JFK's adviser who sometimes operates as virtual secretary of state; so that subordinates don't know which to take orders from. Booboo No. 1 resulted from this fact.

Second Booboo

Booboo No. 2 took place last week when the House Armed Services Committee released hitherto secret testimony by Secretary of Defense McNamara that the Bomarc anti-aircraft missile's chief function was to draw enemy missile fire.

This played right into the anti-American hands of anti-American Prime Minister Diefenbaker, already campaigning desperately for re-election and apparently about to be defeated.

"That means we are just a decoy for enemy fire," he told the Canadian people. "This is not the kind of defense that Canadians

And he proceeded, in speech after speech, to justify his previous refusal to take nuclear warheads on Canadian missiles on the basis of the McNamara statement that the Bomarc would chiefly draw enemy fire thereby making Canada a sitting duck for Russian missiles. The McNamara statement could very well turn the tide of the election.

The big question Canadians are asking therefore is why the Kennedy Administration issued the statement just ten days before an election in which the United States had so much at stake. Before leaving Washington, this writer checked into the facts to try to get the answer.

Orders Secrecy

The fact was that President Kennedy had issued strict orders that no one was to say anything about Canada before the election. He was worried sick over some snafu of this kind. He would permit no statements about the import of Canadian lumber into the United States. His officials would not open their lips regarding the fact that Canada had waited 53 hours before putting the wartime alert into effect against possible

raids by Russian bombers during the Cuban crisis.

Nor would they breathe a word about the alarming fact that Canada had waited four days last October 22 to act on our request for 640 overflights of U.S. planes over Canada to distribute nuclear weapons to our NATO allies, and then permitted only nine flights

Yet despite these strict orders, the McNamara testimony was released. He had given it on Feb. 13, two weeks after booboo No. 1, and one week after Prime Minister Diefenbaker had called for new elections. It was released on March 29, six weeks later. It could just as well have been held until April 9, one day after the Canadian elections. Or it could have been censored altogether. But it wasn't. The reason was a pure fluke.

Congressman George Mahon, D.-Texas, and the chairman of the subcommittee before whom McNamara testified, had only recently scolded the press for making security information. Yet ironically it was he who issued the testimony which threw a monkey wrench into the Canadian election.

I can report that the McNamara testimony was read over by a Pentagon official to see whether it revealed any security secrets. He gave it an official OK. But he was a military expert, not a political expert and he missed the political significance of the Bomarc on the people of Canada. If the word "Canada" had been spelled out in the testimony he might have caught it, but that word was not used.

As a result Canada will probably have a minority government, and Diefenbaker may remain in Lester Pearson, the pro-American, ex-Foreign Minister who leads the Liberal Party, will probably win more seats in Parliament than the conservative Diefenbaker, but with two other parties in the race, he will not get a clear majority.

And under Canadian custom. the Prime Minister does not have to step down until he is voted down in Parliament. Diefenbaker is now Prime Minister. And if Lester Pearson does not get a clear majority, which he probably won't, it will then be up to Diefenbaker to decided whether he steps down or not.

Sen. Paul Douglas of Illinois is one who has a $2.50 rule, with exceptions for books. And he had reason recently to be happy that his rule was in effect. An Illinois resident sent him a solid silver serving tray, which he ordered returned. He found out later that the tray had been purchased by a bad-check artist who had used his name - and purchased the article — as a reference.

Perhaps the most prevalent rule on gift receiving in Congress these days is one devised by an anonymous realist: "Anything you can eat or drink in a day.'

every member nation's taking a community viewpoint rather than a narrow, nationalistic viewpoint. when one of the community's strongest members is obstinately and even passionately national-

Or rather, such an international community cannot go forward in these conditions unless the community's other members are always willing to bow to the will of the nationalistic member. In polite way, German Foreign Minister Schroeder's speech warned the French against hoping for this result. The plain truth is that the other five European powers are flatly unwilling to accept French hegemony.

The resulting climate is suggested by an authentic story that is going the rounds here, about an interview between the No. 1 Eurocrat, Dr. Walter Hallstein, and the French permanent representative to the Common Market commission, Jean-Marc Boegner.

Boegner, who is a convinced Gaullist, reportedly remarked with some bitterness that the French would put forward no further proposals of their own at this time. because anything the French said would be given a "sinister interpretation" by everyone else. To which Hallstein replied drily, "You are quite right."

This is the real heart of the matter. In the past, the Common Market surmounted great obstacles because its members worked together in a spirit of mutual trust, mutual understanding, and mutual concession. Great obstacles were in fact surmounted precisely because this spirit persisted for so long. Gen de Gaulle has made a mockery of this former European spirit. It no longer exists, and this is far more important than de Gaulle's anti-British veto.

Driving In Paris

By John Crosby

I have bought a car. How about that, sports fans? Some people in America have cars (60.919.579 of them). Some French have cars (6,757,000). But that's different. For the rest of the world to drive a car is one thing. For me to drive a car is quite another. Risky. For me. For all of you. (You're safer on that side of the Atlantic than on this one.) Hell of a thing. World teetering on the threshold of thermonuclear war. And now this.

Driving in Paris is insanity. Me driving in Paris is criminal lunacy. I have inveighed against automobiles wrecking cities, lo, these many years. Not only has the automobile industry got a grudge against me. The cars have, too. It's not generally known that all Detroit cars have a grudge built right into them. 'Get Crosby," this little gadget is instructed. (They do marvelous things with computers these days.) Well, there it is. Not only the normal hazards of driving in Paris, but six million voitures with built-in grudges, all snarling, "We've got Crosby out in the open.'

Flying in the face of these hazards (it's been quite conservatively estimated that my chances of living through the spring are one in 12 million), I picked up the car last Saturday, unaccompanied by anyone, friend, counsellor, relative, lawyer, co-pilot - an absolutely brainless thing to do. But, God, what courage!

My voiture is a little fireengine-red Austin 850, and, if you're still with me, Detroit, the reason I shelled out for a foreign car and not one of our own domestic battleships is that this adorable little red bug will park on the thin edge of a five-franc piece. Not the outer face, mind you - any French car can do that - but the edge. And if you'll take my advice, Detroit (and you haven't about anything so far), you'll design your fall line so that the cars fold up and slip into your pocket, because that's the only space left anywhere in the world.

"Attaque toujours!" a friend told me. "That's the only way the French drive, always on the offensive, never vielding an inchand you'll never get anywhere unless you do the same. Attaque toujours, Crosby." That's what the man said. Then he sold his furniture and moved his family to New York. Coward!

The supreme test of courage, skill, sagacity, reflexes, nerves, brain, sinews, adrenalin glands, and heart is the Arc de Triomphe. You shouldn't tackle it the first day. You should train. Drive for 12 years, enter the Indianapolis Memorial Day classic a couple of times. Then you're ready. On any ordinary day, 12,000 cars circle the Arc de Triomphe, like electrons in an unstable atom, ready at any moment to shoot off into infinity.

The idea is to get your car into the center of that maelstrom and then, somehow, to peel off. It can't be done. I have a physicist friend who can prove by differtial calculus that, once in the center of that seething mass, it's aerodynamically impossible ever to get out. Any damn fool who lives in Paris knows that there are cars in there that have revolved around the Etoile for 14 years, like satellites in perpetual orbit around the sun, their drivers long since shrivelled into whitened skeletons, propelled by the car behind them, supported by the cars at each side, condemned to circle endlessly until the Judgment Day. Every child in Paris knows this. And there I was in the middle of it all. And now about French police whistles. They start on C sharp minor and ascend to C over high C. Only bats can hear it. It gives them heart attacks. Nasty noise. And what's he whistling at me for? I'm just circling, preparing to spend the rest of my life here, like everyone else. What's he expect me to do? Stop? Talk French to him? Now? Fortunately the problem solves itself. I sweep past him because I can't do anything else, leaving him tweeting away, giving bats heart attacks.

Presently I fall afoul of one of my fellow circlers. Somehow I've infringed his prerogatives. He protests. Let me tell you how a French motorist protests. Actually, French protest can take one of two forms which I call silent films or talkies. Silent films is when their window is rolled up and you can't hear what they're saying. But, by George, there hasn't been acting like that since Theda Bara. What rolling of eyeballs! What mouthing of round curses. (There's nothing rounder than a French curse. Puckers the mouth in a little 0.) What brandishing of fists! You know. I don't think I've ever seen a fist brandished in anger outside of silent pictures. Fist brandishing is not an American custom. We hit the guy with it. Brandish it. no.

The other kind of protest has a sound track. Sacre-bleu! What words! "Soeur de chameau!" (Sister of a camel.) How can I be a sister of a camel? "Frere de chameau, cochon!" I reply. Why all these epithets at little old me? Some French nonsense about giving the guy on the right the right of way. Once the French wanted bread, peace, and liberty. Now they all want the right of way. Over my dead body. If they won't let the English into the Common Market, why should I give them the right of way?

PS: I got home. Had the car two days. Two parking contraventions! Eighty-six sifflets from the policiers; ten thousand curses. Four hundred blows. But so far not a mark on that lovely shining

The need for this test is not as great today as it was in the past. It seldom is performed as a check because most children have 100 per cent immunity through routine immunization and properly spaced booster shots. But, despite these precautions, outbreaks of

As a result, the Schick test has been revived of late to uncover the reasons for these outbreaks. It is well known that 15 per cent of newborns have a positive Schick test, meaning they are susceptible to diphtheria. The mothers of these infants also are positive. A professor from the Harvard Business School was telling his 6year-old son the story of Cinderella. The boy paid flattering attention - particularly when his father came to the part where the pumpkin turns into a golden coach. He interrupted only long enough to ask, "Hey, Pop, did Cinderella have to report that as straight income, or did they let her call it a capital gain?"

DEVIATING EYE

B. Y. writes: My 1-year-old daughter has exotropia of the left eye. Please me something about this condition.

REPLY

This is a form of cross-eye (divergent concomitant strabismus) in which one eye fixes on one object and the other deviates outward. This condition is not common in early childhood, usually manifesting itself in young adults. It may be associated with myopia. Surgical correction is indicated as well as glasses for nearsightedness.

Souchak Takes One-Stroke Lead At Halfway Point Of Masters

Nicklaus Ties Jay Hebert For Runnerup Spot

Defending Champ Palmer Is Eight Strokes Off Pace

By WILL GRIMSLEY Associated Press Sports Writer

AUGUSTA, Ga. (AP)-Muscular Mike Souchak, a one-time placekicking football end at Duke University, rolled in an 8-foot birdie putt on the final hole Friday and ook a one-stroke lead at 139 over two formidable rivals at the halfway point of the 27th Masters Golf Tournament

The 35-year-old father of four from Durham, N.C., the hard luck man of the professional tour, added a 2-under-par 70 to a first round 69 to take some of the lustre from a smashing comeback by young Jack Nicklaus and a sensational chipping and putting performance by veteran Jay Hebert.

Nicklaus, at 23 youngest of the game's titanic threesome which includes Arnold Palmer and Gary Player, charged back with a 6-unrunner-up spot at 140.

CHICAGO (UPI) — Grain:
Most soybean futures gained small fractions, but other grains ranged steady to lower in rather slow dealings today on the Chicago board of trade. Wheat closed off ½ to ½, corn off ¼ to up ½, oats off ¼ to up ½, rye off ¼ to up ½, soybeans off ¼ to up ¾, and drummed lard unchanged.

Early hedge selling eased corn prices briefly. The commodity Credit Corp. yes-terday sold 1,468,000 bushels to domestic users and 200,000 bushels to exporters. Oats also showed little change, while rye prices worked fractionally lower in featureless trading.

Soybeans opened easy, but the market quickly rallied when resting orders were reached. Exporters, commission houses and local shorts were buyers. Meal and oil declined.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE — Here's how to work it: AXYDLBAAXB LONGFELLOW

One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three L's, X for the two O's. etc. Single letters, apostrophies, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

In Memoriam God called home 2 years ago, April 6th. 545 N. Centre

When I am alone at night
I look up into the blue,
And find the brightest star in sight, Then I pretend it's you.

For Dear, you are the brightest star
You shine above them all.
I can't help making myself wish
That the brightest star would fall. Then I'd run and catch you in my

Would never make us part. TO DAD

Someday, sometime, my eyes shall see The face I loved so well Some day I'll clasp your loving hand, And never say farewell I'd like to think when life is done, Wherever Heaven may be. That you'll be standing at the door Up there to welcome me.

To part with one, we loved so dear. Our hearts still ache with loneliness Our eyes shed many tears We often sit and think of you When we are all alone
